

A Streetcar Named Desire* in Performance

Directions: Use the following steps to bring the play to life.

1. Identify the characters and the main actions in your section of the play.

2. What actors would you select to play these roles? Explain your choices.

3. Design costumes for the characters, and pay attention to styles, colors, and textures.

4. Make basic decisions about staging. Will you use a proscenium stage with a curtain, an open stage, or theater-in-the-round? Will there be an invisible wall, or will the characters interact with the audience?

5. What props and scenery would you use?

6. Focus on sound, and plan for both music and special effects appropriate to your section of the play.

7. How would you handle lighting?

8. Create a playbill to advertise your production.
